LUDLOW, Ky., July 9, '77.
Mr. L. W. Smith:

DEAR SIR—It is the desire of a large number of the community that you repeat your very excellent address of Sunday night, at a time most convenient to yourself. Yours, &c.,
MANY FRIENDS AND ADMIRERS.

We are informed that Mr. Smith will accede to the above request to-night at the Presbyterian Church.

LEXINGTON, KY.
Our beautiful cemetery was well filled with the beaux and belles of the city last Sunday.

Assistant Postmaster Gen. Tyner, of Washington, D. C., has been spending several days in our city. He is looking after fine stock.

The managers of the fair for the benefit of Charity Hospital netted $753. The silver pitcher, to be voted to the most popular candidate for Sheriff, was won by Gen. Robinson.

The market yesterday opened with a fair demand for good milk, and only a moderate demand for cattle. Good milks sold from $90 to $140. Cattle ranged from 3 cents to 3½ cents.

A very lively discussion has been going on here between Rev. Allen, a Campbellite minister, and Rev. Father Major, a Catholic priest. Allen made some very grave charges against the people of Litchfield, where Father Major is stationed, which caused Father Major to give him the grand bounce.

DATON, KY.
Mr. G. G. Goetz left for Louisville this morning to attend the Sengert festival. The dummy cars left Pittsburgh yesterday, and will arrive here the latter part of this week.

A resolution requesting the County Commissioners to erect a music stand in the court-house park was adopted. L. A. was awarded the contract of winding up and keeping in order the town clock for one year for the sum of $74.

AMONG THE HINDOOS.
The Reason Why Animals and Insects are so Numerous Among Them.

From the southern portion of the Indian peninsula Professor Mourier Williams has recently returned, and has published some exceedingly interesting facts of his tour. He says:

"Perhaps the most striking point of difference between Northern and Southern India is due to the circumstances that the South possesses all the characteristics of the Tropics in the greater exuberance of all kinds of life and vegetation. Let any one imagine the contents of the best-stocked zoological and botanical gardens of Europe multiplied indefinitely, and scattered more or less abundantly over an immense country, and he will have some idea of what this exuberance really is. To realize it fully, however, one must go to the extreme south and Ceylon. There one may come across almost every animal, from a wild elephant to a firefly. There, as one strolls through a friend's compound, or drives to a neighboring railway station, and sees the choicest plants and trees of European hot-houses growing luxuriantly in the open air.

As to animals, they seem to dispute the possession of the soil with man. They will assert with perfect impunity their right to a portion of crops as rears and the foot he eats, and they even effect a lodgment in the houses to be regarded as co-tenants. This is owing, in a great measure, to the sacredness of animal life in India. Not only is there an absolute persuasion in the mind of a Hindu that such animals, such as cows, monkeys, and dogs, are more or less pervaded by divinity, but most Indians believe that there are eighty-four lakhs (a lakh is ten thousand) of species of animal life through which a man's own soul is liable to pass.

In fact, any noxious insect or loathsome reptile may be, according to the Hindu religion, an incarnation of some deity, and may be venerated as such. Hence, no man, woman, or child would think of killing a snake, or a lizard, or any animal of any kind. Hence, too, in India animals of all kinds appear to live on terms of the greatest confidence and intimacy with human beings. They can often learn to be afraid of their enemies, the European immigrants.

Asquith will settle affectionately and tenderly on the hands of the most recent comers, leeches will insinuate themselves lovingly between the interstices of his lower garments, parrots will peer inquisitively from the eaves of his bedroom into the mysteries of his toilet, crows will carry off impudently anything portable that takes their fancy on his dressing table, sparrows will hop about imperiously and take the bread of his tablecloth, bats will career triumphantly round his head as he reads by the light of his duplex lamp, monkeys will domesticate themselves jauntily on his roof, and at certain seasons snakes will domicile themselves unpleasantly in his cast-off garments, while a whole host of feathered creatures will build their nests confidently under the trees of his garden before the very eyes of the village children who play near his compound.

ABOUT THE FLI.
When a Congress street woman answered the door-bell yesterday she found a stranger on the step. He had a bundle in his hand, a smile on his face, and he said:

"Madam, can I sell you some fly-paper?"

"Does the paper fly?" she asked.

"No, madam, but it makes the flies fly."

"What do I want the flies to fly for?" she continued.

"To fly, madam," he was explaining, "the flies called out."

"I want you to fly. I can get along with flies better than with agents."

"But I am not on the fly," he softly protested.

"Our dogs," she grimly replied, "and so was I. He flew around the corner, the agent flew for the gate, the roll of fly-paper flew over the curb, and a new-born fly climbed a tree-box to be out of the mess and snouted."

"She flew, fly, flyest, he fled, and I believe the dog got a piece of meat with that coat-tail."

DIDN'T NEED PAPERS.—"If you and I both live we will know it's all right, and will not need any papers," said a loud-mouthed man to a companion on the Ohio Creek Road, yesterday, who had been annoying everybody in the car by his loud conversation over a trade which he and his friend had just consummated after a long struggle. "No need of any papers at all," said a thin man, who rose solemnly in his place, ten seats away, and addressed the speakers: "Just, an expense for nothing. Here are—" and he passed to count the passengers; there were three of them, and he was a very every-blasted word of the transaction. There would have been thirty-seven of us," continued the thin man, "but I see that two of us have been talked to death," and as he resumed his seat, he pointed to a newly-married couple who had fallen asleep in each other's arms.

The Courts.
COMMON PLEAS.
In the case of Walter F. Straub against Moses F. Wilson, a motion to dismiss the appeal for want of jurisdiction was overruled.

Wm. C. Mitchell against the Cincinnati & Indiana Railroad and others.

The plaintiff averred that John Clevins Short entered into an agreement with the Cincinnati & Indiana Railroad Company, by which Judge Short granted the right of way to the railroad company over the old bed of the Whitewater Canal running through his land. Among other provisions of the agreement it was stipulated that Judge Short and his family, except the home of the aforesaid Judge Short, at canal race, shall have perpetual right to travel on the canal of said company free of charge.

The plaintiff was a member of Judge Short's family, being his stepson, and continued to receive annual passes from the road until 1873, when he moved to North Bend. Since that time the company has refused to issue passes to him, and this action was to recover what it cost him for his passage meanwhile to and from the city, and to compel a performance of the contract in the future. The defendants demurred. Demurrer sustained and judgment for the defendants.

The Court yesterday refused to admit Charles Doleworth to bail. The prisoner was tried by a jury for murder in the first degree. The jury disagreed. The Court held that the granting of the motion to admit him to bail was purely discretionary, and inasmuch as six of the jurors on one of the ballots found for the defendant, the Court held that the opinion that the motion should not be granted.

In the case of Mary F. Tappin against James B. Tappin for alimony, the Court granted an allowance until further order of $25 per month.
